

Development Intern

National Public Radio (NPR) seeks a Development Intern for Summer 2010! This position is ideal for a student interested in planning events and working. The department has three main areas of concentration: Individual Giving; Institutional Giving (foundations and government agencies); and Development Resources (services such as special events, communications, prospect research and database management). The intern will perform the following:

- Work in major foundation and grants
- Plan and supervise major events
- Research and database management

The ideal candidate will be an undergraduate or graduate student that is flexible, creative, and have the ability to manage projects independently. Interest in public radio and fundraising preferred along with good basic writing skills, proficiency in Microsoft Office suite and overall computer skills.

This is a full-time internship position offered for the Summer 2010 internship semester (June 7 through August 13, 2010). NPR's Internship Program offers many exciting opportunities for students and recent graduates to learn about public radio, network with very talented professionals, and interact with fellow intern colleagues! Interns also have the opportunity to develop their own radio show, Intern Edition!

Please download an application from www.npr.org/about/jobs/inter. Students should submit their completed application, cover letter and resume by the application deadline of February 15, 2010 to the contact information below.

For a full internship description or to learn more about other NPR internships, students can visit us at www.npr.org/about/jobs/intern.

Thank you!
